Professor of Musicology John Richardson 2008-02-01 An attractive English professor finds her 15 year marriage to a homicide cop falling apart. she has lived in the fantasy words of English Literature for as long as she can remember, often picturing herself as Lady Guinevere, queen to King Arthur and living in the mythical kingdom of Camelot.

Despite this, she instinctively feels that below the surface lies something so evil that to face it might mean her death; so she remains safe in her world of fantasy. Then one day she is contacted on the internet by a person named Cameo and her life changes forever. She can no longer hide in the fantasy world.

As the 20th Century draws to a close, liberal syndicated columnist Melanie Dvorak has excellent health, more money than she knows what do with, and a supportive if eccentric husband. Yet she is troubled by anxiety and worries that she is out of touch with her readership. A violent encounter at a fancy boutique in Boston's Back Bay gives her notoriety but not fame on her own terms. As her husband Simon Herbst dabbles in independent film production, Melanie explores unexpected avenues to bring her through the tumult of a new age.

Arnold's debut novel, GUILT: The Eighth Deadly Sin, is the story of Cedric von Silkyshag, a bipolar writer sent to a mental hospital upon completion of his first novel, CHUSE YOUR INHERITANCE: The Adventures of Jim Bob Bach & Grampa Goose. Book I, Contemplating Mrs. E, and Book III, Cedric's Dream on Day 2 of Purgatory, explore the ramifications of guilt, specifically so-called "white guilt" and "German collective guilt," as well as the related issues of racism, antisemitism, Catholicism vs. Protestantism, fascism, and reverse discrimination. Book II, The Cenotaph of Cedric Silkyshag, can best be described as "A Joycean Ode to Pop Culture" -- a pastiche of Finnegans Wake and Nietzsche's Thus Spake Zarathustra -- satirizing the internet and exploring "The Isolation of the Soul."

this, she has a mysterious yearning in her heart. She returns from a glorious trip in Jamaica where she was exposed to a society where the workings of racism was not institutionalized and where people's lives were not predominantly directed and affected by race. It was hard battling lies, prejudice, fear, hate, and to further complicate matters, she met and fell in love with a handsome man with the only problem being that he was Black. With her mindset, how could this have happened? How was she going to introduce him into her White world knowing that he would be totally and utterly rejected if not marked for death? Her dilemma then revolved around following her heart to what could be true happiness or keeping her family happy by denying her emotions and subjecting herself to agonizing mental turmoil. At home, Angelica soon discovered that her daily consciousness and sanity was now put to the test as she battled her own family on the subject of skin color.

When away from home, there was still no relief as her predominantly White school was also an epitome of hatred. Church proved to be no better as its leadership made the Klu Klux Klan look like child's play. She is then forced to look within but discovered that she was severely brainwashed in a cesspool of lies, misinformation and hate. As passion and love took over her being, she began to delete erroneous personal conscious and subconscious files - stockpiled in her mind from birth, for the defense and fortification of racism. Her struggle was a turbulent one but persistently Angelica pushed on with the reconstruction of self. Then, when she thought things couldn't get any worse, tragedy strikes ...

The Transmission of Affect

Teresa Brennan 2014-02-15

The idea that one can soak up someone else's depression or anxiety or sense the tension in a room is familiar. Indeed, phrases that capture this notion abound in the popular vernacular: "negative energy," "dumping," "you could cut the tension with a knife." The Transmission of Affect deals with the belief that the emotions and energies of one person or group can be absorbed by or can enter directly into another. The ability to borrow or share states of mind, once historically and culturally assumed, is now pathologized, as Teresa Brennan shows in relation to affective transfer in psychiatric clinics and the prevalence of psychogenic illness in contemporary life. To neglect the mechanism by which affect is transmitted, the author claims, has serious consequences for science and medical research. Brennan's theory of affect is based on constant communication between individuals and their physical and social environments. Her important book details the relationships among affect, energy, and "new maladies of the soul," including attention deficit disorder, chronic fatigue syndrome, codependency, and fibromyalgia.

beginning, somewhere between everywhere and nowhere, a family lived. A family of seven children, born to the bloodline of the Fury of Death, a horseman of the gods, and a human mother. The union both blessed and cursed, the jealous gods condemned them, sending the other Furies to enact their vengeance, declaring the heirs abominations of nature, and burying them beneath the weight of unspeakable tragedy. But not all was lost. Through the darkness, the three fates granted the children an opportunity for redemption through reincarnation. Their destinies, written and woven into the books of fate. Their lives, lived over and over again, as the seven deadly sins. This collection of short stories follows the tales of Greed, Pride, Lust, Wrath, Gluttony, Envy, Sloth, and the forgotten eighth sin, as they navigate the trials of forgiveness, love, identity, and redemption. Even sins seek salvation.
