Thomas Aquinas 2016-10-01 Excerpt from The "Summa Theologica" Of St. Thomas Aquinas, Vol. 2: Second Part Qq. Ci.-CXL On the contrary, Tully says (de Inv. Rhet. ii.) that it is by piety that we do our duty towards our kindred and well wishers of our country and render them faithful service. I answer that, Man becomes a debtor to other men in various ways, according to their various excellence and the various benefits received from them. On both counts God holds first place, for He is supremely excellent, and is for us the first principle of being and government. In the second place, the principles of our being and government are our parents and our country, that have given us birth and nourishment. Consequently man is debtor chiefly to his parents and his country, after God. Wherefore just as it belongs to religion to give worship to God, so does it belong to piety, in the second place, to give worship to one's parents and one's country. The worship due to our parents includes the worship given to all our kindred, since our kinsfolk are those who descend from the same parents, according to the Philosopher (ethic. The worship given to our country includes homage to all our fellow-citizens and to all the friends of our country. Therefore piety extends chiefly to these. Reply Obj. I. The greater includes the lesser: wherefore the worship due to God includes the worship due to our parents as a particular. Hence it is written (malach. I. If I be a father, where is lily honour P Consequently the term piety extends also to the divine worship. About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books. Summa Theologica Complete in a Single Volume Thomas Aquinas 2018-05-14 The Summa Theologica is a compendium of theology written by Thomas Aquinas between 1265 and 1273. In Roman Catholicism it is the sum of all known learning and doctrine, of all that can be known about God and humanity's relations with God - a landmark in the history of theology that famously offers five proofs of God's existence, the first three of which are cosmological arguments; the fourth, a moral argument; and the fifth, a teleological argument. The third quarter of the thirteenth century marked the first decisive philosophical encounter between Hellenism and Christianity. The rediscovery of Aristotle's works after the Dark Ages ushered in a new era of intellectual fervor in Europe, and the work of Thomas Aquinas is a commentary on Aristotle, whose writings were lost to the non-Arabic world until the beginning of the Thirteenth Century. To many, Aristotle's worldview was a pagan threat to Christianity. To Aquinas, it provided an exciting cosmological framework on which to build an all-encompassing Christian worldview. His thoughts unfolding with a calmness of order and an assurance of judgment, Aquinas explores in the Summa the primary role of the senses in the acquisition of knowledge and the metaphysical analysis of things in terms of matter and form. But unlike Aristotle's "God," who did not care one whit about the world, the God of Christianity, insisted Aquinas, is a personal God. Like Aristotle, Aquinas believed that each human being has a soul and that all created things have a purpose. For Christians, all are part of a divine plan. This dazzling synthesis of Catholic doctrine has had a profound impact on Christian thinking since the thirteenth century and has become the de facto official teaching of the Catholic Church -- the intellectual underpinning of the Church to this day.

Thomas Aquinas 2016-07-13

Excerpt from The "Summa Theologica" Of St. Thomas Aquinas, Vol. 2: Second Part, Qq; LXXX.-C Obj. 2. Further, What is offered by one man to another is the more praiseworthy, according as the person it is Offered to is in greater need: wherefore it is written (isa. Lviii. Deal thy bread to the hungry. But God needs nothing that we can offer Him, according to ps. Xv. 2, I have said to the Lord, Thou art my God, for Thou hast no need of my goods. Therefore religion seems less praise worthy than the other virtues whereby man's needs are relieved. Obj. 3. Further, The greater the obligation to do a thing, the less praise does it deserve, according to I Cor. Ix. 16, If I preach the gospel, it is no glory to me, for a necessity lieth upon me. Now the more a thing is due, the greater the Obligation of paying it. Since, then, what is paid to God by man is in the highest degree due to Him, it seems that religion is less praiseworthy than the other human virtues. On the contrary, The precepts pertaining to religion are given precedence (exod. XX.) as being Of greatest importance. Now the order of precepts is proportionate to the order of virtues, since the precepts of the Law prescribe acts of virtue. Therefore religion is the chief of the moral virtues. I answer that, Whatever is directed to an end takes its goodness from being ordered to that end; so that the nearer it is to the end the better it is. Now moral virtues, as stated above (a. 5: Q. IV., A. Are about matters that are ordered to God as their end. And religion approaches nearer to God than the other moral virtues, in so far as its actions are directly and immediately ordered to the honour of God. Hence religion excels among the moral virtues. The Summa Theologica of Saint Thomas Aquinas

Summa Theologica, Volume 2 (Part II, First Section) St Thomas Aquinas 2013-01-01
"The Summa Theologica is the best-known work of Italian philosopher, scholar, and Dominican friar SAINT THOMAS AQUINAS (1225-1274), widely considered the Catholic Church's greatest theologian. Famously consulted (immediately after the Bible) on religious questions at the Council of Trent, Aquinas's masterpiece has been considered a summary of official Church philosophy ever since. Aquinas considers approximately 10,000 questions on Church doctrine covering the roles and nature of God, man, and Jesus, then lays out objections to Church teachings and systematically confronts each, using Biblical verses, theologians, and philosophers to bolster his arguments. In Volume II, Aquinas addresses: happiness good and evil love and hatred hope and despair anger virtue sin and grace and much more. This massive work of scholarship, spanning five volumes, addresses just about every possible query or argument that any believer or atheist could have, and remains essential, more than seven hundred years after it was written, for clergy, religious historians, and serious students of Catholic thought."

Excerpt from The "Summa Theologica" Of St. Thomas Aquinas, Vol. 2: First Part, Second Number Qq. XLIX-LXXXIX After treating of human acts and passions, we now pass on to the consideration of the principles of human acts, and firstly of intrinsic principles, secondly of extrinsic principles. The intrinsic principle is the power and the habit; but as we have treated of the powers in the First Part, it remains for us to consider the habits. And in the first place we shall consider them in general: in the second place we shall consider Virtues and vices and other like habits, which are the principles of human acts. Concerning habits in general there are four questions to be considered: Firstly, the substance of habits; secondly, their subject; thirdly, the cause of their generation, increase, and corruption; fourthly, how they are distinguished from one another. Under the first head, there are four points of inquiry: (1) Whether habit is a quality P (2) Whether it is a distinct species of quality (3) Whether habit implies an order to an act (4) Of the necessity of habit.
