Dutch Connection Paulo Carneiro 2016-06-09 Dutch Connection chronicles the history of the Sephardim expelled from Spain in 1492, their stay in Portugal, where they were subjected to forced conversion, as well as their role in the expansion of the Portuguese empire. Divided into short sections, the narrative continues with the development of the Amsterdam Community, the inclusion of Jews in economic, and cultural life of the country, as well as their shipment to Brazil in 1630 when the Batavians invaded the country in the "Sugar War." On this occasion, Jews were their allies not only for speaking Portuguese but also for understanding the sugar trade. In Recife, Brazil, they founded the first Synagogue in the Americas, Kahal Zur Israel, the first cemetery and also the first literary Hebrew text in the New World. Moreover, under the rule of Dutch Count, Maurice von Nassau, the community became rich and powerful. According to the American historian, Robert Chester Smith, Recife was the only city of Portuguese America worthy to be called a city at that time. After twenty-four years of occupation, in 1654, the Dutch were expelled, and so their Jewish allies. Despite the threat of the Inquisition, many remained in the country, mixed the population. Most returned to Europe or went to Dutch colonies in the Antilles. However, a group of twenty-three Jews landed in the colony of New Amsterdam--now New York--and are recognized today as pioneers in the founding of first US Community. Along the way, they suffered an attack by Spanish pirates, shipwreck, and Inquisition threats in Jamaica before being rescued by a French frigate. On September 12, 1654, they celebrated the first Rosh Hashanah of US history. In May 2012, President Barack Obama said that the Brazilian refugees found not only a safe haven to land, but also a tradition of freedom that unite forever their history to the history of America.

On Opinions J. M. van Dijk 2016 Entering into a transaction inevitably involves risks, including legal risks. If there is a Dutch connection, there may well be Dutch legal risks. The purpose of a Dutch law opinion is to analyze those risks. The opinion giver, an appropriately qualified legal expert—a lawyer (advocaat), civil-law notary (notaris) or sometimes an in-house lawyer—confirms in their opinion that certain risks do not exist and highlights risks that do. This gives the opinion recipient a basis for determining whether, after weighing the pros and cons, it is responsible from a Dutch law perspective to enter into the particular transaction. The expert giving an opinion must provide the care required by Dutch law. Since failure in his duty of care may render him liable for damage sustained by the opinion recipient, an opinion giver must know what level of care is required of him. Equally, an opinion recipient must know what level of care it can expect. Legal opinions have largely become standardized and this, in turn, has had the effect of standardizing the opinion giver's duty of care. That duty of care is the subject of this book, which is intended as a practical guide to Dutch law opinions and the various elements that comprise them. Based on practice and with its focus on practice, the guide analyzes which risks will typically be indicated in an opinion and which risks will not, clarifying the level of care an opinion giver must provide and an opinion recipient may expect. The Dutch Connection Inge Zwaga 2018-11-14 Is this a cookbook, a history book, a fun to read book or just a picture book? You decide, it can be whatever you want it to be !Why THE DUTCH CONNECTION ? Well, because there are numerous cities with Dutch names located in the USA, some of them where the Dutch heritage is still very prominent. Did you know for example that there are 15 Amsterdams in the USA, Tulip Festivals in Orange, Iowa and Holland, Michigan and that there are even towns where snert (traditional Dutch pea soup) is on the menu ?For each town you will not only discover a recipe for the home cook bringing back those nostalgic flavours from times gone by, but also current American favourites with a "touch of Dutch.."..From Holland with love, Ing

New Netherland Connections Susanah Shaw Romney 2014-04-28
Susanah Shaw Romney locates the foundations of the early modern Dutch empire in interpersonal transactions among women and men. As West India Company ships began sailing westward in the early seventeenth century, soldiers, sailors, and settlers drew on kin and social relationships to function within an Atlantic economy and the nascent colony of New Netherland. In the greater Hudson Valley, Dutch newcomers, Native American residents, and enslaved Africans wove a series of intimate networks that reached from the West India Company slave house on Manhattan, to the Haudenosaunee longhouses along the Mohawk River, to the inns and alleys of maritime Amsterdam. Using vivid stories culled from Dutch-language archives, Romney brings to the fore the essential role of women in forming and securing these relationships, and she reveals how a dense web of these intimate networks created imperial structures from the ground up. These structures were equally dependent on male and female labor and rested on small- and large-scale economic exchanges between people from all backgrounds. This work pioneers a new understanding of the development of early modern empire as arising out of personal ties.
